VOL. VIII. No. 7. WHOLE No. 377.

THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

A Contented Life.

(AT TWENTY.)
Five hundred dollars I have saved—
A rather moderate store—
No matter, I shall be content
When I've a little more.

(AT FORTY.)
Well, I can count ten thousand now—
That's better than before;
And I may well be satisfied
When I've a little more.

(AT SIXTY.)
Some fifty thousand—pretty well—
But I have earned it so;
However, I shall not complain
When I've a little more.

(AT EIGHTY.)
One hundred thousand—tick and odd—
Ah, life is half a bore;
Yet I can be content to live
When I've a little more.

(AT ONE HUNDRED.)
He dies—and to his greedy heirs
He leaves a countess store;
His wealth has purchased him a tomb—
And very little more.

VARIETY.

The universe is the visible garment of the Invisible.

The groves and woods are the musical academies of the singing birds.

No compassion is felt for the author who denied sleep to himself to give it to his readers.

If the waves threaten to engulf you, don't add by your tears to the amount of water.

Indolence is a stream which flows slowly on, but yet undermines the foundation of every virtue.

Never court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanities or their vices.

Sin and misery are not lovers, but they walk hand in hand, just as if they were.

Better submit in silence to a wrong-headed fellow than try to set him right.

The possession of wit often gives a man courage to play the fool.

A man of wit would be often embarrassed without the company of fools.

Resolve on the course of life which is most excellent, and habit will render it most delightful.

What do we seek redress for? Injuries. Where do we find it? In injuries.

The rich are more envied by those who have a little than by those who have nothing.

Those who walk most are generally the healthiest; the road of perfect health is too narrow for wheels.

A stranger would hardly be able to tell the mistress and the maid apart when both are in a passion.

If the storm of adversity whistles around you, whistle as bravely yourself; perhaps the two whistles may make melody.

Throw off all oppressive thoughts when you seek your pillow. Do not, like a camel, lie down under your burden.

If you are asked to do a right thing, answer by doing it. 'Tis a short answer, but it does not give offence.

The son and heir of a man who has risen from poverty to wealth, begins where his father left off, and generally leaves off where his father began.

Falseness used to travel in seven-league boots; now it has kicked off its boots, and travels by telegraph.

Usefulness without merit is awkward, and merit without modesty is in oment. Modest merit is doubly charming.

A New Zealand chief maintained that he had a good title to his land, because he had eaten the former owner.

Good diet makes healthy children, and the South Sea Island cannibals think that healthy children make good diet.

Annual hearings become hereditary in families at the close of the twelfth century; they took their rise from the knights painting their banners with different figures, and were introduced by the crusaders.

The first balloon was constructed at Paris by M. Montgolfier, in 1783, when Rozier and the Marquis d'Arlandes ascended, after which numerous ascents followed, many of which proved fatal.

The well known cotton cloth, calico, is named from Calicut, a city of India, which was discovered by the Portuguese, 1498. Calico was first brought to England by the East India Company, in 1631.

Diamonds were first brought from the East where the mine of Sumburpur was the first known, and where the mines of Golconda were first discovered in the year 1684, those of Brazil in 1728.

The diving bell was first used in Europe in the year 1600. It was used on the coast of Maui, in rescuing from the wreck of a part of the famous Spanish Armada, some time before the year 1693.

Glass bottles were first made in England about 1568. The art of making glass bottles and drinking glasses was known to the Romans in the year 79, A. D., as they have been found in the ruins of Pompeii.

A Dog Story.—We were traveling through Canada, says a newspaper correspondent, in the winter of 1862, and after a hard day's ride, stopped at the Lion Inn; and the contents of the stage, numbering about nine persons, soon gathered around the cheerful fire. Among the occupants of the room we observed an ill-looking cur, who had shown his wit by taking up his quarters in so comfortable an apartment. After a few moments the landlord entered, and observing the specimen of the canine species, remarked: "Fine dog, that! Is he yours, sir?"

"No, sir," was the reply.

"Very sagacious animal. Belongs to you, I suppose, sir?"

"No, he doesn't," was the answer.

"Then he is yours, and you have a treasure," (throwing the animal a cracker.)

"Nothing of the kind."

"O! (with a smile) he belongs to you as a matter of course?" addressing himself to the last passenger.

"No, sir."

"Beautiful dog! Yours, sir?" addressing himself to another.

"No!" was the blunt reply.

"Come here, pup! Perhaps he is yours, sir?"

"No," was the reply.
